- 25% becoming parents by age 21

The Impact

One caring business can help change a child's path.

Research from Harvard University's Developing Child Center highlights how stable, supportive relationships with caring adults can help buffer the effects of toxic stress and support healthy development. other research shows students who are in mentoring programs are:

- 59% more likely to earn better grades
- 52% less likely to skip school
- 81% more likely to participate in extracurricular activities
- 90% more likely to volunteer in their own communities
