Extend Grace to Your Family

"Love bears all things. . ." (1 Corinthians 13:7a)

A little boy in his prayer before bedtime said, "God, I don't know how you put up with everyone in the whole world. I just have one little brother, and it's really hard for me to put up with him sometimes." No relationships are perfect, because no person is perfect. Sometimes, the hardest people to be patient and kind to are the ones you are around the most and closest to: your family.

When Paul gave a description of God's kind of love, he stated that "love bears all things." To bear is to protect, cover, shield, and guard. Some paraphrases replace the word bear with phrases that help a reader understand the word, such as: "love puts up with anything," "love is always ready to make allowances." Bearing love is described in 1 Corinthians 13:4 when Paul writes, "love is patient and kind." Patience refers to being long-suffering with others when they let you down. Kindness is treating others with grace that is not dependent on the merit of the receiver. It is dependent on the heart of the giver. All of us need grace, and God gave it to us out of His love. We need to give and show grace to others, especially in our families.
