Chaplain Dan's Hat Heading to Malta

I'm at the Charlotte airport, on my way to Malta. Our SIM Emmaus Team of global chaplains are getting together there for a retreat and meetings.

I was scheduled on Lufthansa Airlines, leaving this evening, but I was notified this morning that my flight was cancelled due to a Lufthansa strike. Thankfully my travel agent got me rebooked on United. It was a scramble, but I'm at the airport now and will be arriving in Malta a few hours later than originally planned (tomorrow at 4:15 pm)

I've got a very short layover in Washington DC, but should be able to make the connection for my flight to Frankfurt. In Frankfurt, I'll be cooling my heels for over six hours. Ugh! Then on to Malta. MT travel details. There are seven of us SIM chaplains, though two (a couple) are now based in Malta.

Appreciate prayers for all of our tams

Also pray for our time together. All seven of us have never been together in person before. We all travel extensively, so it will be good to be all in one place.
