Freedom From Fear

arr. Joseph Martin

Be not afraid when falls the night. Let courage cleanse you in its light.

Draw close unto its sacred flame till all but faith and truth remain.

Be not afraid when shadows cry and sorrows speak in solemn sighs.

For in the stillness rests a song, a call for peace, a hymn of hope,
A cry for life, a prayer for home, a fragile cry for life, a prayer for home.

Be not afraid when war resounds, when battels rage and hate abounds,
When hostile nations shout and scream and threaten every noble dream.

Be strong, your fear release, and to the violence whisper peace.

Dona nobis pacem

In our sleeping, grant us peace. Dona nobis pacem.

In our dreaming, grant us peace. Dona nobis pacem.

In our seeking, grant us peace. Dona nobis pacem.

Be not afraid, for morning breaks, and bright with joy, the world awakes!

This is the time, this is the place that fear gives way to healing grace.

For when peace and promise find a home,

We can boldly face the great unknown, and know that we are not alone.
