Hello once again from Point Hope Alaska! It sure feels good to be back home in the village! As stated in our last prayer letter, we were in the lower 48 visiting 13 churches. We visited some of you that already support us, as well as being able to present the ministry to some new church families. We are praying and hoping that some of these church families will also partner with us in reaching the Eskimos out here in Arctic Alaska!

It was so nice to see those of you that we have not seen since we were on deputation over 8 years ago! Time sure does fly by! But we are so thankful for you that have been supporting us all of these years! We are so grateful for you all! Thank you!!

We have some very exciting news - we are expecting a baby girl in March! God worked the timing out perfectly so that we were able to get all the needed doctors appointments for Jennifer and the baby. Since Jennifer is such a high risk pregnancy, and there are no doctors or nurses in the village, Jennifer and I have decided again that the safest thing for her and our baby is to have her stay in New York with Jacob and Joanna so that she can continue to be closely monitored. She will be getting blood work and ultrasounds often. Please pray that there will be no complications and that both Jennifer and baby will stay healthy! Although this will be very hard to be away from each other for over four months, we know it will all be worth it in the long run as I am still able to minister out here on the mission field.

The winter has started here in the village as there is now snow on the ground and the darkness is starting. We still have about 6 hours of sunlight, but that will change quickly to where we will not see the sun for almost a month and a half. Please pray that through the long winter months, our church here and our people would be a light in this dark land. People need the Lord, and we sure desire to see many more souls receive the light of the glorious gospel and receive Jesus as their Saviour!

God bless and we hope you all have a great fall time and beginning of winter!
