Sermon Series

The Space Between: Discovering God in an Either/Or World
February 22 – April 5

Lent calls us into the wilderness—not to reduce our lives to easy answers, but to sit honestly with tension, ambiguity, and transformation. We live in an either/or world that insists on sides, binaries, and quick conclusions. Yet the Gospel of Luke reveals a different way: a faith shaped not by rigid opposites, but by the holy space between them.

We will journey with Jesus through moments where life refuses to be neatly divided—and real transformation takes place not at the extremes, but in the living, breathing tension of life and faith.

Sermon Reflection

Words for Meditation: “The way of the Lamb costs something—but changes everything.”
– Rev. Mark Feldmeir

Today’s Questions

- Where in your life are you most tempted to choose the war horse over the donkey—to reach for force, control, or domination because the way of peace feels too slow or too risky?
- What would it look like for you to embody the way of the Lamb this week—not by withdrawing from the struggle, but by refusing to become what you oppose?

Today’s Takeaways

1. Between the _____ and _____, Jesus reveals a _____.
2. The spirit of _____ is real, but it is not _____.
3. The way of the _____ costs something, but _____.
