Sermon Series

The Torch and the Pail: Faith Without Fear and Reward

April 26 - May 31

What if we removed every transaction from our faith, every promise of reward, every threat of consequence? An ancient Sufi story tells of an angel carrying a torch to burn down the mansions of heaven and a pail to put out the fires of hell so that we might finally see who truly loves God. Not out of fear. Not to earn mercy. Just love, for love's sake. This series is an invitation to come home to a faith with no strings attached, where perfect love casts out fear, and God desires mercy, not sacrifice. What does it look like to simply love God for the sake of love itself? Come and let's explore this journey of faith together.

Sermon Reflection

Words for Meditation: "God eternally reaches out to returning children and will never be satisfied with anything less than full restoration." - Henri Nouwen

Today's Questions

- Which son do you recognize more in yourself right now—the one who has run from love, or the one who has been exhausting yourself trying to earn it? What would it look like to stop?
- Is there an area of your life where shame has convinced you that you can't come home—that you've gone too far, failed too badly, or waited too long? What might it mean to believe that the father is already running toward you there?

Today's Takeaways

1. Love does more than _____—it restores _____ and reclaims _____.
2. Some of us _____ from love, others strive to _____ it—but both roads can leave us _____.
3. You can _____ now.
