Sermon Series

Behind the Music: The Songs That Sing Us Back
August 2–23

Long before there was a hymnal, there was a harp in David’s hands. Scripture’s oldest prayers are songs—laments, hallelujahs, complaints sung straight at heaven—because the writers of the Bible understood something we sometimes forget: there are truths the heart will only receive set to music. The songs we love work the same way. They slip past the part of us that argues and go straight to the part of us that aches—saying something about longing, loss, and grace that we didn’t know we needed to hear. This summer, we’ll take a handful of songs seriously and listen for what they’ve been telling us about God all along.

Sermon Reflection

Words for Meditation: “You have made us for yourself, and our hearts are restless until they rest in you.” – Augustine

- Where do you experience restlessness or deep longing in your life, and how might God already be present within it—wooing you toward greater love, wholeness, or transformation?
- What are you holding onto that no longer nourishes you, and what might become possible if you trusted God enough to let go and take the next step?

Today’s Takeaways
