Backpacks of Opportunity

By Jake Shoun

Every time I visit Honduras or Guatemala, church members greet me as “Hermano Jacob”— Brother Jacob. I am from another country and another culture, and most of them know very little about me. But they don’t need to; they know I love God, just as they do, and that makes me their brother.

Another reason this happens is that greetings are very important in Latino culture. Every Sunday, I try to greet and say goodbye to every member. If I forget someone, my wife tells me!

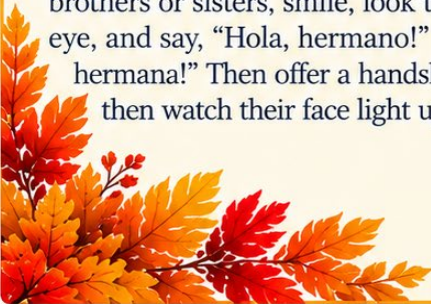

Every Latino church I have visited has been the same. Brothers greet brothers. Sisters greet sisters. A handshake, a hug, a smile, and the words “Hola, hermano” or “Hola, hermana.” In some ways, you might even call it their version of a “holy kiss.”

The next time you see one of our Latino brothers or sisters, smile, look them in the eye, and say, “Hola, hermano!” or “Hola, hermana!” Then offer a handshake or a hug; then watch their face light up.

In that simple moment, you may discover that you have gained another brother or sister in Christ—someone who loves God just as you do.

On October 25, you’ll have another opportunity to practice your Spanish at our Latino Rico!” Say it after you try each dish. It’s a wonderful compliment—and it might just make you a favorite guest at the table!

The festival also helps fund our Backpacks of Opportunity project. This year, we hope to provide 300 backpacks for children in need. Each backpack costs approximately $25, so every donation helps us reach our goal. Come hungry. Come ready to practice Spanish. Come ready to meet your Latino brothers and sisters.
