

Dear Church Family,

This summer, we're setting our sights on heaven. As Christians, hope uniquely shapes our faith—we anticipate Christ's return and the restoration of all things.

Some warn against being “so heavenly minded that we're no earthly good.” Usually, that describes Christians who seem detached from real needs around them. But today, the greater danger may be being so earthly minded that we're no heavenly good.

Imagine how differently we'd live each day if we were captivated by the future already secured for us in Christ. Wouldn't we spend our time, treasure, and talents differently?
