KEY TAKEAWAY

Being a citizen of the Kingdom of God means living under the authority of King Jesus, whose reign supersedes every earthly allegiance.

ACTION STEP

Pray “Your Kingdom come” every morning this week, asking God to help you submit to His authority.

ICEBREAKER

- If you could spend one day as the king or queen of any country, what's the first unserious thing you would change?

KINGDOM UNLIKE ANY OTHER. READ MARK 4:30–32 AND MARK 1:14–15.

- When you hear the phrase "Kingdom of God," what naturally comes to mind? How did this week's sermon challenge or expand your understanding?

- The Kingdom of God is defined primarily by God's reign and rule. What difference does it make to think of God's Kingdom in terms of His authority rather than simply a place or a group of people?

- What are some practical ways we can see evidence of God's Kingdom advancing in our everyday lives, even when the world around us seems increasingly broken?

Discussion Questions

NOVEMBER 8, 2026

A KING UNLIKE ANY OTHER. READ MARK 4:35–41 AND MARK 5:1–13.

- In both passages, Jesus demonstrates extraordinary authority. What do these two encounters reveal about who Jesus is?

- The disciples were right to run to Jesus during the storm, but they questioned whether He cared about them. Why do we sometimes interpret God's apparent silence as a lack of concern? How can we fight that temptation?

- If Jesus has authority over creation and even the powers of darkness, why do we still struggle to trust Him with the circumstances of our own lives?

A CALLING UNLIKE ANY OTHER. READ MARK 5:14–20.

- The man Jesus delivered wanted to accompany Him, but Jesus sent him home instead. Where might God be calling you to obey Him in a way that feels uncomfortable or requires you to surrender your preferences?

- The Corners Chapel desires to be a multiethnic, multigenerational church. Why might pursuing that vision create challenges or disagreements? How can we navigate those differences in a way that demonstrates our shared allegiance to Christ?
