

1. When you hear Psalm 24:1 “The earth is the LORD’s, and everything in it” what is hardest for you to genuinely think of as belonging to God?
2. What’s the difference between approaching your finances as an owner versus a steward? What could practically change if you began asking, “God, what do You want me to do with this?”
3. Read Matthew 6:24. Of the three things money often promises; security, significance, and control, which one is most tempting for people in our culture? Why?
4. Read 1 Kings 17:8-16. What makes the widow’s obedience so remarkable? How is trusting God when resources are limited different from giving only when we feel financially comfortable?
5. Money can function like a “check-engine light” for the heart. What can our spending, saving, debt, and generosity reveal about what we’re trusting?
6. What’s one tangible stewardship step God may be asking you to take this week; creating a budget, signing up for FPU, addressing debt, beginning to give, increasing generosity, having an honest financial conversation, or something else?
