REVIEW last week:

Summary

What is the true cost of our redemption, and why does it matter for how we live today? One of the most profound truths in all of Scripture is that we were ransomed, not with silver or gold, but with something of infinitely greater worth. Every religion in the world represents man climbing toward God, but biblical Christianity stands alone in declaring that God came down to man. The distinction is everything. The blood of Christ is not a peripheral detail of our faith. It is the very foundation upon which our standing before God rests. Understanding this changes how we see ourselves, how we respond to accusation, and how deeply we can walk in gratitude.

Key Points

- The word "ransomed" in 1 Peter 1:18 means to set free by paying the full price, and redemption is a decisive act of God, not of man
- God's plan of redemption in Christ was established before the foundation of the world, confirming that God operates from a single, sovereign plan rooted in His omniscience
- Every human being carries a record of sin debt that stands against them before God, and this debt carries legal weight that cannot simply be dismissed or overlooked
- All world religions apart from biblical Christianity represent man's attempt to reach God through means such as self-improvement, good works, religious tradition, self-denial, and rule-keeping, none of which can satisfy God's standard of perfect holiness
- Only the blood of Christ, God the Son, possessed the worth required to pay the debt of mankind's sin, as affirmed in Acts 20:28 where Scripture states that God purchased His church with His own blood
- Christ bore the sin and merited wrath of mankind on the cross as a substitute, receiving the punishment humanity deserved while imputing His righteousness to all who believe

Key Passages of Scripture:

- 1 Peter 1:18-21
- 2 Timothy 3:16-17
- Ephesians 1:4
- Colossians 2:13-14
- Psalm 49:7-9
- Romans 6:23
