"Let's examine and probe our ways and turn back to the LORD. Let's lift up our hearts and our hands to God in heaven"
Lamentations 3:40-41

Kerry and I finished our time in the book of Lamentations last Monday. Friends, it is an intense read and although it is only five chapters, it laid heavy on both of us as we read thru it. Personally, Lamentations 3:40-41 has stayed with me all week: examine, probe, turn back, lift up our hearts and hands.

I have learned to sit up straight and listen when God brings conviction to my heart and soul. It is not something I initially cherish or get excited about; however, when the Holy Spirit brings truth to bear, I have learned to stop and listen.

Those two verses taught me and each of us to stop and be attentive to His voice in our lives. We are called to examine and probe our ways before God, to carefully inspect our hearts, motives, and character, and place it before Christ Himself. This is where heart transformation begins, through honest introspection, deliberate surrender, and a renewed orientation toward God.

Lifting our hearts and hands to God displays vulnerability and a readiness to receive His response, a physical and spiritual gesture of submission and openness, representing not a mere ritual, but sincere engagement with God Himself.

This is where the invitation becomes personal: When was the last time you came before God open and vulnerable, quiet enough to listen, and willing to yield to the prompting and direction of the Holy Spirit? Too often, we can turn faith and our relationship with Christ into a checklist of behaviors to manage instead of a life surrendered to Christ alone. True heart transformation begins when we stop striving, open our hands, and let Him lead us back to Himself.

"But he who practices the truth comes to the Light, so that his deeds may be manifested as having been wrought in God."
John 3:21
