Prayer Target City: Reading

Population: 144,000

Reading is a large Thames Valley town in Southeast England and is located at the junction of the River Thames and river Kennet.

Reading has road and rail communications with the Great Western railway line and the M4 motorway (40 miles west of London).

Reading is officially located in the Royal County of Berkshire and has been recognised as the county town since 1867.

Reading Abbey was founded by Henry I in 1121 and he is buried there, as are other members of the royal family.

The abbey was one of the pilgrimage centres of medieval England and Reading Minster is the town's oldest ecclesiastical foundations but was largely destroyed in 1538 during the dissolution of the monasteries by Henry VIII.

Reading was a nationally important medieval town with close royal connections, but today it enjoys a "Silicon Valley" commercial status with links to information technology and insurance.

Reading hosts two universities, a large student population and is home to one of England's largest rock music festivals.

Demographically speaking, Reading is 86.5% white, 5.2% Asian, 4.14% Black with 3% to 4% of Chinese and other racial groups.
