

WEEK #13

When You Need to Pray Together - The Solution

When triggers in our marriage seem routine, the power of prayer is a holy disruption to the status quo. Conversations with God are our most intimate moments. Therefore, speaking to Him for the benefit of others is one of the most loving things we can do.

A marriage where both spouses continually practice loving actions (prayer) is one that cannot help but move in the right direction.

When feelings of love and affection are being overshadowed by our problems, prayer is foundational to reversing our angry actions and setting us up for gentle responses. Praying for our spouse is a demonstration of both discipline and love. When we are disciplined to love our spouse through prayer, we plug into the supernatural and all-powerful strength of God.

We have nothing to lose when we commit to praying with our spouse. We have healthy, godly marriages to gain.

Next week - When In-laws Cause Friction - The Problem