Children are very important in tribal cultures. They are considered the best of themselves — and are looked upon as the future of their societies. It is not uncommon therefore for the adults of a village to keep an eye out for all the kids of the village irrespective of who the children belong to.

One of the priorities of our work involves caring for the welfare of the many children who live within the ministry focus of our mission. By extension, this ministry focus also includes the wellbeing of the parents of these children as well. Educating families about their nutritional needs, their basic health and sanitation concerns, and the importance of giving attention to personal dental hygiene has been part and parcel of this ongoing effort.

Over the years we have been able to construct and operate multiple student dormitories to benefit underprivileged kids. Most of these dormitories have been built within walking distance of well run government schools. Even in areas where student dormitories are not presently needed, we have come alongside local schools to help them meet some of their pressing needs.

The sound teaching we have in the scriptures about raising healthy children, combined with the best practices found among the people groups we are working with has provided us with excellent guidelines in this important area.

We are seeing that helping people safeguard their own ethnic and cultural identities leads them to also find their personal and group identity in Christ. Finding our place in Christ strengthens our sense of belonging in the world, and ultimately secures our eternal life.

Again, we want to thank every one of you, our friends and supporters, for all your prayers and support — without which we would not be able to carry out any of our Lord's great work!

Your Coworkers,

Joni & Nangsar
