QUESTIONS FOR SMALL GROUPS & PERSONAL REFLECTION:

1) Do you think people are often more willing to confront hostility from outside the church than compromise inside the church? If so, why?

2) The sermon warned about “looking away” from things we know are wrong because confrontation is uncomfortable. When does silence become wisdom—and when does it become compromise?

3) How can Christians pursue holiness together without becoming harsh, self-righteous, or constantly suspicious of one another?

4) Why do you think sin continues to appeal to us even when experience repeatedly proves it does not truly satisfy? What do we do with that reality?

5) Jesus responds to compromise not only with warning, but with promises of belonging, satisfaction, and life. What does that teach us about the heart of repentance?

6). The sermon ended with the idea that every heart eventually chooses whose sword it fears. What pressures or fears most compete for your loyalty to Christ right now?
